Back with a BANG

Can Vicky McClure smoke out a dangerous terrorist with a personal vendetta?

NEW DRAMA

Trigger Point

Sunday & Monday, 9pm, ITV1 (box set, ITVX)

Jason Flemyng as Steven Wyles

Daring bomb-disposal officer Lana Washington finds herself in another desperate race to save the lives of Londoners as Trigger Point returns to ITV1 for an explosive third series this week.

The six-parter, produced by Line of Duty creator Jed Mercurio, opens with Lana and her team of brave expos battling to save a man from a black cab that's been primed to blow up if he leaves it.

OUT FOR REVENGE

However, as they struggle to free him, the expos realise that he wasn't chosen at random and the attack is the start of a sinister campaign from a terrorist who's targeting people in a mysterious bid for revenge.

'There are loads of twists and turns again this year,' says Vicky McClure, who plays Lana. 'Your Sunday and Monday nights are about to be filled with "Triggerverse" gold – the explosive moments are coming thick and fast. We've made a banging show, and everyone's really upped their game.'

Viewers can also expect a variety of terrifying new devices for the team of expos to contend with as they race to catch the villain behind the carnage – terrorist Steven Wyles, played by Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels star Jason Flemyng.

'We want to be as authentic as possible with the bombs, but we have to bend the truth a bit,' reveals McClure. 'We have real bomb experts on set who say, "In real life, this is how it would be done, which would take eight hours." Well, viewers don't have eight hours to watch me doing that. We want to make Trigger Point exciting. This show is all about escapism.'

A DARK PLACE

Lana and her fellow expos – Danny (Eric Shango) and Hass (Nabil Elouahabi) – are joined by new recruit Rich Manning (SAS Rogue Heroes' Mark Rowley), while DI Amar Batra (Maanuv Thiara) and DS Helen Morgan (Natalie Simpson) return to the cast.

However, one man who won't be returning is DCI Thom Youngblood (Mark Stanley), who met a brutal end after forging a romance with Lana in last year's second series. Following the death of her pal Joel and her brother Billy in the first series, it was another hammer blow for the brave expo.

'Lana's been through a lot and when we first started talking about this series, we wanted to touch on her PTSD,' says McClure. 'All the pain and trauma she's experienced is having an effect on her, so we'll see her going through an addiction where she's self-medicating. We wanted to look at how she's handling that and try to make it as real as possible.'

With a fourth instalment of the drama already in the can and ready to hit our screens next year, we know Lana's tale will continue for at least one more series, although McClure doubts if the show will continue beyond that.

'Personally, I can't see it,' she reveals. 'The only reason I say that is because Lana's always walked away without a scratch and I don't know how far we can keep delivering that. But I love the show so I'd never say never.'

LOOKING FORWARD

If Trigger Point doesn't return it means the 42-year-old star would be free to team up with Jed Mercurio and co-stars Martin Compston and Adrian Dunbar next year to film more of hit BBC1 cop show Line of Duty.

'The thought of getting the gang back together is weirdly emotional,' says McClure of a potential seventh series. 'It would be incredible to do another season. But until somebody says it's definitely happening, we don't know for sure. We'll let you know as soon as we know!'

Stephen King's diabolical Pennywise terrifies the inhabitants of 1960s Maine in a prequel series

NEW HORROR

It: Welcome to Derry

Monday, 9pm, Sky Atlantic

The shapeshifting alien entity best known as Pennywise the clown is one of the most terrifying creatures ever to come from the pen of horror maestro Stephen King. So steel yourself for Sky Atlantic's new series It: Welcome to Derry, which takes us deeper into the monster's dark origin story.

Director Andy Muschietti, who helmed both the 2017 film adaptation, It, and its 2019 sequel It: Chapter Two, returns to direct this eight-part prequel series set in 1960s Maine, where the disappearance of a young boy coincides with the arrival of a demonic presence in the town of Derry that only a group of children seem to be aware of.

'There's a set of questions and enigmas that stem from the book and the movies that are addressed throughout the course of our story,' Muschietti tells TV&Satellite Week. 'If you go into the book, you will notice that some of the stories are resolved, but most of them are like a puzzle that has not been finished. That was the framework for us.'

The series opens with Matty Clements (Miles Ekhardt) – a character referenced in the original novel as one of the creature's earlier victims – seemingly meeting a grisly end, although his schoolmate Lily Bainbridge (Clara Stack) later hears Matty's voice echoing out of the pipes in her bathroom.

INSPIRATION

'You see the circumstances of Matty's life in a very visual way,' says Muschietti. 'He has a black eye, and he's alone in a movie theatre in the middle of the night – those are pieces that viewers have to put together. We get to spend more time with Lily over the course of the series, so we understand her predicament.'

As well as delving further into the origins of the monster, with Bill Skarsgård set to reprise his acclaimed performance as Pennywise later in the run, the series also introduces the characters of Leroy Hanlon (Jovan Adepo) and his wife Charlotte (Taylour Paige), who are the grandparents of the character Mike Hanlon from the original book. Leroy is a pilot with the US Air Force, who is assigned to Derry's air base and is looking forward to setting down roots with his family for the first time.

'My dad was in the Air Force – he's since retired, but I took a lot of influence from what I remembered,' says Adepo. 'What's really exciting is that we get an opportunity to present the family that ended up eventually producing Mike Hanlon – seeing what traumas were passed down from his grandparents, and their experiences as a young couple that get to the point of where we meet Mike in the first film.'

Paige also drew inspiration from her family when it came to inhabiting the character of Charlotte.

'My grandmother was born in the late 1930s, so she would have been about my age at this time,' she says. 'I often thought of her, and her carefulness and the way she would articulate things. As a Black person in 1962, there was a very intentional way of holding yourself.'

As horror fans will know, there is a 27-year gap between the events of the two films, which take place in 1989 and 2016, and setting the first season of It: Welcome to Derry in 1962 creates another distance of 27 years in the story. The creators have planned a three-season arc for the show, with an intended Season 2 set in 1935, and the third in 1908.

'We wanted to tell the story backwards,' says Muschietti. 'We used the 1960s in America because it was an era of big unease – of discrimination, and also the Cold War. It's a canvas that's very appropriate for drama and horror, and especially for a bunch of characters who are terrorised by a shapeshifter that turns into your worst fear...'

SEARCHING for justice

Ruth Wilson and Dame Emma Thompson team up to find a missing child in a new thriller from the author of Slow Horses

NEW THRILLER

Down Cemetery Road

From Wednesday 29 Oct, Apple TV (first two eps on 29 Oct, then weekly)

Calling all fans of Slow Horses! Author Mick Herron is swapping MI5 outcasts for nosy neighbours as another of his acclaimed novels gets the Apple TV treatment.

Set in a sleepy Oxford suburb, Down Cemetery Road is an eight-part, razor-sharp thriller based on Herron's 2003 book of the same name. Adapted by Slow Horses writer Morwenna Banks, it follows art restorer Sarah Trafford (His Dark Materials' Ruth Wilson), whose uneventful, ordinary life is upended when a neighbour's house explodes during her dinner party.

When Sarah learns that a five-year-old girl, Dinah Singleton, has gone missing in the blast, she becomes obsessed with finding her and hires acerbic, reluctant private investigator Zoë Boehm (Oscar-winning star of Sense and Sensibility, Dame Emma Thompson) to help.

As the two women probe Oxford's secret-laden streets, they unravel a far-reaching conspiracy involving military and government cover-ups, and quickly become targets themselves.

TV&Satellite Week arranged a virtual chat with Thompson, 66, and Wilson, 43, to dig further into the details…

What appealed to you about Down Cemetery Road?

Thompson I'm a Mick Herron fan and he's the reason I wanted to do this. I love his writing. He's funny, but also incredibly sharp about human behaviour. When I'm looking for a role, I want it to be well written and something I haven't seen before. There are hardly any female private investigators on screen, especially like Zoë. She's an outsider and quite rude, which I find very satisfying to play.

Wilson It was the people for me, starting with Mick Herron and his style, tone and storylines, and of course, Emma Thompson. I loved the idea of working with her and creating a dynamic duo with Sarah and Zoë.

How do Sarah and Zoë become involved in the mystery of the missing girl?

Wilson That was the big question for us: what's Sarah's motivation? She's not satisfied with her life deep down and wants justice and the truth. There's something quintessentially British about Mick Herron's stories as they're often about an underdog, people like you and me who try to win over corruption. Sarah represents a normal person who makes a stand.

Thompson Zoë just wants to pay her bills, but she becomes revolted by the corruption she encounters. She has a great moral sense, and both women can't bear the injustice of it all.

Why do they work well together?

Wilson They're an odd couple, but Sarah's recklessness is useful to Zoë because she's like a bull in a china shop. She doesn't understand the stakes of the situation.

Thompson They're from completely different worlds, which makes them a wonderful combination. Neither of them has any kind of special skills, though. You won't find them hanging off a plane, but they will use a laptop as a weapon.

Who or what inspired Zoë's distinctive look?

Thompson It's from the 1970s era that she grew up in, and the androgyny of Annie Lennox and David Bowie. Our costume designer found the leather coat in a bin sale in Camden, London, and it's perfect. That, plus a pair of Doc Martens and a spiky haircut like one of my English teachers, and I was straight back in the 1970s. It's very rock 'n' roll.

Can you relate to your characters at all?

Wilson Well, in some ways, Sarah shouldn't be in this show. She's just like you or me, and it's like she's just found herself in an episode of Slow Horses. She's thrilled and also terrified, and if I were in this scenario, I'd be up for it but also dead scared.

Thompson I'd like to be more like Zoë because I admire rude women who don't care what anyone thinks. I've been told that I can be rude, but I would prefer to be ruder, particularly at this stage in my life, so I'm going to try to take a leaf out of Zoë's book. I think I'd make a terrible PI, though. All actors would; we're too obvious!

The stories of pioneering astronauts who journeyed into space

NEW FACTUAL

Once Upon a Time in Space

Monday, 9pm, BBC2 (box set, BBC iPlayer)

More than 65 years since the Soviet Union's Sputnik triggered a space race with the USA, the world is entering a new era of exploration with billionaires Elon Musk and Jeff Bezos competing for dominance and predicting that millions of people will be living in space by 2045.

This week, BAFTA-winning filmmaker James Bluemel takes a look back at mankind's journey towards the stars. Featuring archive footage and interviews with astronauts, the first episode of the four-part series focuses on those who were selected by NASA to be astronauts in 1978 – many of whom were civilians with no military experience.

Here are three of their stories…

Fisher with daughter Kristin

ANNA FISHER

In 1978, NASA hired their most diverse group of astronauts to date. Among them were six women – the first in the space agency's history.

'Anna was the first mother to go into space,' says Bluemel. 'Looking at the press clippings around her launch really gives you an idea of the attitudes of the time and the scrutiny she was put under.'

Fisher, now aged 76, was aboard the space shuttle, Discovery, which launched in November 1984, and made home videos for her one-year-old little girl Kristin in case she never returned.

'The papers were calling her a bad mum,' says Bluemel. 'But those home movies showed what a loving mother she was and what a painful decision it was for her to leave.'

RON McNAIR

McNair grew up in a segregated South Carolina and became the second Black man to go into space in February 1984.

'Ron was inspired by Lieutenant Uhura [played by Nichelle Nichols] from Star Trek,' says Bluemel. 'Lots of kids were, but I think he took it a little bit more seriously than most!'

McNair tragically died along with six other astronauts in the 1986 Challenger disaster, but not before inspiring other African-Americans into space, including Charles Bolden, who flew on four space shuttle missions and became head of NASA.

'Charles told Ron he thought NASA would never take him,' says Bluemel. 'Ron said that was the dumbest thing he'd heard, so Charles did join NASA – and did become an astronaut.'

McNair inspired a generation

MIKE MULLANE

The son of a World War Two pilot, Mullane was selected alongside Anna Fisher and Ron McNair in NASA's pioneering class of 1978.

'When the Soviet Union launched Sputnik in 1957, my dad was reading the newspaper and he was so angry because the Russians had done it before America,' says Mullane, now aged 80, in the series.

Mullane was chosen by NASA

The former US Air Force captain and Vietnam veteran completed three missions aboard Discovery and Atlantis. But he admits that, in 1978, competing with civilians for a ticket into space was something of a tough pill to swallow.

'Looking back, I can see the ridiculousness of me thinking I was better than them because I had flight experience,' recalls Mullane. 'They were smart people and I feel privileged to have been around them.'

Stephen Moyer hunts killers and crooks in the art world

NEW DRAMA
Art Detectives

Thursday, 8pm, U&Drama (box set, U)

Artful crimes are at the heart of this colourful series starring True Blood's Stephen Moyer as DI Mick Palmer, the eccentric head of London's (fictional) Heritage Crime Unit.

The six-parter gets under way with Palmer called to solve the murder of an art historian at Astleigh House in Yorkshire. There he establishes a gallery of potential suspects and recruits inexperienced but insightful PC Shazia Malik (Virdee's Nina Singh) to help him.

Later in the run, the duo travel the UK investigating a range of crimes, from the death of a Titanic memorabilia collector to the theft of a priceless Chinese vase from a locked vault. Meanwhile, Palmer embarks on a hesitant romance with museum curator Rosa Conaghan (Sarah Alexander) and grapples with the return of his rogue father Ron (Larry Lamb).

Larry Lamb as Ron

Here, The Forsytes star Moyer, 56, tells us more about what's in store…

What attracted you to this show? I'd never really played a detective before so that was exciting. I knew there would be a whimsical, comedic element to it, and we all love high-level posh crimes! Mick is slightly unusual for a policeman, eccentric even. We've made a conscious decision to make him real yet different to the kind of characters we've seen before.

What drives him? His father is a famous forger who has been on the run for years, Mick's love of art comes from being surrounded by Ron's real and fake works as a kid. That was also when detective comics taught Mick his morals.

Can you tell us about his personal life? He's a passionate art geek and a brilliant detective,

NEW DRAMA
Return to Paradise

Friday, 8pm, BBC1

The cooler autumn nights might be rolling in but there's still plenty of sunshine on the horizon as Return to Paradise – the sun-soaked Death in Paradise spin-off – gets its second outing on BBC1.

'We're thrilled with what we achieved with Series 1,' says Anna Samson, who reprises her role as uptight Detective Sergeant Mackenzie 'Mack' Clarke in the Australia-set show. 'It was very cool that viewers took Mack into their hearts, even though she's not always polite, sweet or easy to like!'

After overhearing her ex-fiancé, forensic pathologist Glenn Strong (Tai Hara), admit he still has feelings for her in the Series 1 cliffhanger, it's but not very good at life, and terrible at relationships…

Did you learn anything interesting during filming? To become a brilliant faker, not only do you have to be an incredible artist, you also need to be a detective because if you're going to forge something from the 1700s, for example, you will have to track down a canvas from the 1700s, the wood that would have been used in the frame, and the paint and brushes!

Have you enjoyed creating this world with your co-stars? Larry Lamb and I have wanted to play father and son for decades, so when I texted him about this he replied, 'Tell me where, son!'

revealed Mack hasn't flown back to London and is still in her Australian home of Dolphin Cove… for now.

'We rejoin Mack with an emotional question mark hanging over her – will she let Glenn know she overheard him before leaving Dolphin Cove for good?' says Samson, who is rejoined for Series 2 by Ardal O'Hanlon as franchise favourite DI Jack Mooney.

Mack and Glenn

DAUNTING DILEMMA

'We first realise Mack's still in Dolphin Cove because Jack's on his way to the airport in London to pick her up,' adds the star. 'But Jack lets her stay in Oz to sort things out – he's like Mack's fairy godfather!'

Meanwhile, Mack rejoins Detective Senior Constable Colin Cartwright (Lloyd Griffith) to probe the chemical poisoning of a man alone at sea – but can she solve the problem of her complicated love life?

'Mack's definition of what she wants from life is starting to shift,' explains Samson, who says she'd love for a crossover with the stars of Death in Paradise and Beyond Paradise.

'I'm trying to make it happen where Mack can have dinner with all the detectives from the "Paraverse",' she smiles. 'The actors would have a great time. I'm up for a detective dinner party!'

The chips are down for Colin Farrell's con-man gambler in a high-stakes thriller

NETFLIX Ballad of a Small Player

NEW Available: Wednesday 29 October
Genre: Thriller

After picking up a Golden Globe in January for his performance as criminal kingpin Oswald Cobb in Sky Atlantic's The Penguin, Colin Farrell ditches the prosthetics this week when he stars in psychological thriller movie Ballad of a Small Player on Netflix.

The 49-year-old actor plays an Irish con man drowning in debt, who passes himself off as an English aristocrat, Lord Freddy Doyle, so he can lay low in Macau, one of the biggest gambling centres in the world and dubbed the Las Vegas of Asia. Having fled there with a stolen fortune, he spends his days drinking heavily and his nights frittering away what little money he has left in the city's bustling casinos.

'When you meet Doyle, he's on the precipice of losing everything and falling apart, psychologically and emotionally,' reveals Farrell. 'He is, like most addicts, somewhat narcissistic, and can only see the world through the lens of his own needs and his own desires.

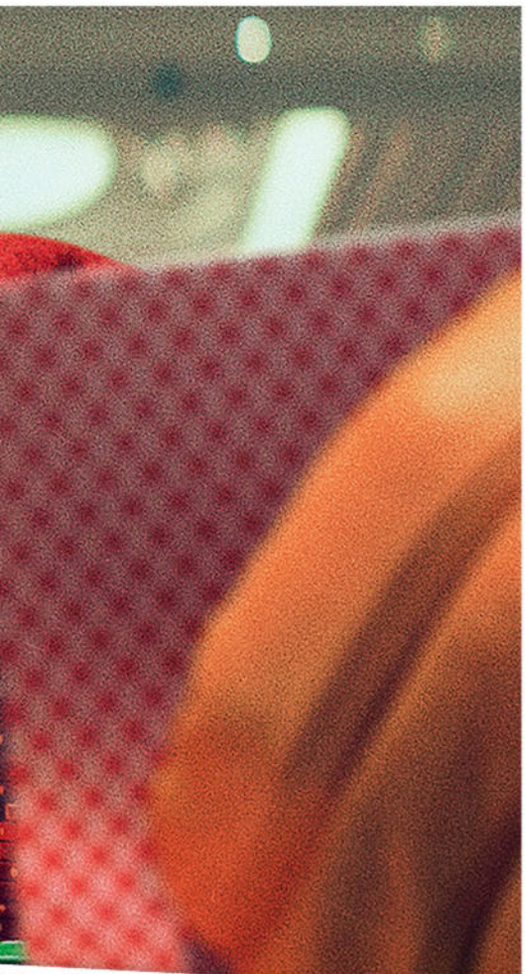
HONOURABLE?

'Deep down he is fundamentally a decent fella. But he's got all his lines mixed up, all his wires crossed. He's come to Macau to live his dream and make his mark on the world, but it doesn't quite pan out the way he had envisioned.'

With private investigator Cynthia Blithe (Tilda Swinton) hot on Doyle's tail to retrieve the money he stole in London, he strikes up a bond with the mysterious Dao Ming (Fala Chen), a casino employee with secrets of her own. Can she hold the key to his salvation?

'This film is loud, bombastic and operatic, and there's some tragic stuff, for sure, in relation to Dao Ming,' says Farrell, who earned his first Oscar nomination in 2023 for The Banshees of Inisherin. 'But there's a sense that Doyle, who we've seen act in despicable and self-serving ways, might have an opportunity to be a decent human being going forward.'

Cynthia Blithe (Tilda Swinton)



Lord Doyle with Dao Ming (Fala Chen)

Directed by Conclave's Edward Berger, the film was shot on location in Macau where Farrell immersed himself in the world of high-stakes gambling.

PANDEMONIUM

'We were taken around a few casino floors and shown the rooms where the high rollers play, versus the floor where the general public go and play low hands. I had a few games of baccarat.

'Shooting in a live casino in the early hours of the morning was interesting and mad. It was just chaos. You could see people winning and shouting. It felt very authentic. It's always lovely to shoot in a real environment with people milling around.'

Sir Gary Oldman as Jackson Lamb

Race against time

The agents of Slough House must act fast to prevent carnage

tv+ Slow Horses

LAST ONE Available: Wed 29 Oct Genre: Drama Season: 5 Episode: 6

Jackson Lamb's team of misfits race to save the day when terrorists launch the final stage of their multi-pronged attack on London in the finale of Apple TV's Slow Horses.

After orchestrating a massacre at the (fictional) Abbotsfield shopping arcade, the violent group have bombed London Zoo and tampered with fuel tanks, causing cars to catch fire across the city, leading to fear and panic.

Lamb, played by Sir Gary Oldman, believes the gang are simply adopting the same destabilisation strategy used by MI5 in other countries in the past and knows the final act in that playbook involves attacking a place of worship.

He is proved right when the terrorists give MI5 Deputy Director-General Diana Taverner (Kristin Scott Thomas) a chilling deadline. She has one hour to transfer £100m or they will carry out an atrocity in an unknown location.

But Lamb has a hunch about the place they might be targeting and dispatches his agents, River Cartwright (Jack Lowden) and Shirley Dander (Aimee Ffion-Edwards), to try to stop them.

Jack Lowden as River Cartwright

BRUTAL STORY

The finale also offers a rare insight into Lamb's past, following a traumatic story he told in the third episode about a spy who was captured and tortured in Berlin during the Cold War by the Stasi, who also killed his girlfriend and unborn baby.

'Is he the agent in his story, or is it only true in part?' says Oldman. 'He denies it, but he certainly leaves it ambiguous until the very end, the final shot, and even then, how much do we believe?'

Mind of a murderer

A documentary takes a new look at serial killer Aileen Wuornos

The real Wuornos

Charlize Theron in Monster

NETFLIX Aileen: Queen of the Serial Killers

NEW Available: Thursday 30 October Genre: One-off documentary

Having shot dead seven men in Florida between 1989 and 1990, Aileen Wuornos was executed in 2002. At the time of her death, aged 46, she had come to be regarded as one of America's most infamous female serial killers. And in 2004, her story was brought to the screen in the acclaimed biopic Monster starring Charlize Theron in an Oscar-winning role.

Now, Netflix's one-off documentary Aileen: Queen of the Serial Killers offers a fresh take on Wuornos' troubled life. She claimed to have suffered a catalogue of abuse during her traumatic childhood, became a sex worker and had been convicted of armed robbery.

The film also re-examines the murders, taking an in-depth look at how, following her arrest in 1991, Wuornos initially insisted that she had shot her victims, who were her clients, in self-defence as they raped or attempted to rape her.

There is audio testimony from those who knew Wuornos well, along with previously unseen interviews with the killer that took place during her decade on death row, as well as archive footage of late reporter Michele Gillen, who spoke to an unrepentant Wuornos in prison for US news show Dateline in 1992.

'I didn't like my childhood but I didn't dwell on it, it didn't mess my life up,' Wuornos told Gillen. 'And I do not regret it [the murders], they were going to kill me, I killed them. That is a human thing. It's a battle between life and death.'

Liam Hemsworth takes over as monster hunter Geralt as the fantasy saga returns

NETFLIX The Witcher

NEW Available: Thursday 30 October
Genre: Fantasy Season: 4 Episodes: 8

A new era dawns for The Witcher as Liam Hemsworth steps into Geralt of Rivia's iconic battle-worn boots, replacing Man of Steel's Henry Cavill for the final two seasons.

But when he first got the call, The Hunger Games star was hesitant to take up the sword.

'It's challenging to take on a lead role midway through a series,' says Hemsworth, 35. 'But as a massive fan of the video game, I felt I could bring something cool to it.'

In the new eight-part run, formidable monster-slayer Geralt, AKA the White Wolf, is separated from his soulmate, sorceress Yennefer of Vengerberg, and Witcher apprentice and 'Child of Surprise', Cirilla 'Ciri' of Cintra.

He's seriously wounded from his clash with powerful sorcerer Vilgefortz but remains undeterred in his quest to find Ciri, journeying south across the war-ravaged continent with his companions, Jaskier and Milva.

PERILOUS MISSIONS

But while Geralt battles even more menacing creatures, Yennefer is on a mission to defeat Vilgefortz and Ciri is on the run with a gang of misfits called The Rats. Will they come together as a family once again?

'Geralt is injured and frustrated, but he believes Ciri is being held captive by Emperor Emhyr [Bart Edwards] and is having horrific dreams about her, fearing the worst,' says Hemsworth. 'His journey is extremely difficult. There's a lot of inner turmoil.'

This season welcomes Rome's James Purefoy as Stefan Skellen, an advisor to Emperor Emhyr, plus The Matrix star Laurence Fishburne as worldly-wise barber-surgeon Regis.

'Geralt trusts Regis and allows him to become a counsellor of sorts. He plays an important part in holding Geralt together physically and mentally,' says Hemsworth. 'There's a big fight sequence where Geralt can barely walk, but he takes an elixir created by Regis, which sees him drive through soldiers, cutting down 15 people.

'It was a night shoot and raining hard, but pulling off that scene felt great. Everyone nailed it.'

Dame Penelope Keith shares her memories of making The Good Life 50 years ago

NEW FACTUAL

The Good Life: Inside Out

Tuesday, 9pm, U&Gold

BBC1's hit comedy The Good Life ran for just three years between 1975 and 1978 and had only 30 episodes, yet it remains one of the nation's best-loved sitcoms and can even count the late Queen among its fans.

Written by John Esmonde and Bob Larbey, it starred Richard Briers as Tom Good who, with his wife Barbara (Felicity Kendal), embarked on a self-sufficient lifestyle in the leafy London suburb of Surbiton, much to the horror of the couple's class-conscious neighbours, Jerry and Margo Leadbetter (Paul Eddington and Dame Penelope Keith).

To mark the show's 50th anniversary, Keith takes viewers on a personal journey through the show's history in U& Gold's feature-length retrospective, The Good Life: Inside Out.

She'll also be joined by celebrity fans, including Tom Allen (above), Jamie Oliver and Alan Titchmarsh to cook some new recipes and reinvent classic dishes.

Guy Martin: The British Train That Changed the World

Sunday, 7.30pm, C4

Cameras follow Guy Martin as he helps a team of railway enthusiasts restore a replica of George and Robert Stephenson's Locomotion No 1, the world's first steam engine. To mark the 200th anniversary of its inaugural journey between Darlington and Stockton, Martin is on the footplate as the engine travels the same route at a speed of 15mph.

In My Own Words: Tom Jones

'I look back on it as one of the happiest times, this amazing atmosphere of fun and laughter,' says Keith, 85. 'It was so well written and so witty. Margo had to do everything perfectly and be top dog. Sometimes she was terribly disapproving and so often she engaged mouth before brain. But she genuinely adored the Goods – and likewise Jerry, although he infuriated her!'

SET VISIT

Cameras follow Keith as she steps back into the Leadbetters' familiar living room, which has been lovingly recreated for the documentary, and she also returns to Northwood, west London, where the exterior scenes were shot. She's even reunited with some of Margo's 1970s gowns.

'There was a costume budget, but of course Richard and Felicity never changed clothes, Paul had his suits, and so the person who got the most money spent on them was me,' remembers Keith. 'My hair also changed about four or five times in every episode, which in 25 minutes meant quite a lot of time spent in make-up and hair.'

DINING DISASTER

The programme includes archive interviews with Keith's co-stars, while she reveals that she once gave both Briers and Eddington food poisoning!

'At the end of every series, one of us would invite the other three to their house for lunch. It was my turn and I made chilli con carne,' she recalls. 'It was only the following year when it came to a discussion about lunch that Paul came over and said, "Penny, we'll go somewhere else for lunch because last year Richard and I ended up in hospital." They were terribly ill but they'd waited a year to tell me. Of course I never did lunch again!'

HAUNTED Halloween

NEW FACTUAL

Daisy May and Charlie Cooper's NightWatch

Sunday, 9.30pm, BBC2 (box set, BBC iPlayer)

Actor siblings Daisy May and Charlie Cooper share a fascination with the paranormal. Now, the pair – who shot to fame as Kerry and Kurtan in their BAFTA-winning mockumentary This Country – mark Halloween by reuniting for a spooky six-part series as they stay overnight in some of Britain's most-haunted buildings.

'Ever since we were kids, we've been into the paranormal and supernatural,' explains Daisy May. 'I think it came from being allowed to watch a lot of horror films growing up,' adds Charlie. 'Our mum had friends who were spiritual mediums and there was always a Ouija board lying around at home.'

The pair will be heading to properties including a remote bothy in the Scottish Highlands and an abandoned 16th-century pub in the Midlands. But their ghost-hunting escapades begin with a stay in Gloucester Prison. Built in 1792, it's believed to be haunted by some of the 123 prisoners who were hanged there.

'You'd never ever go in there if you weren't a little bit obsessed. It's so bleak!' laughs Daisy May. 'We met Clive, the custodian, who showed us around, that was creepy enough in itself. I did think then, "What are we doing getting left in a cell here overnight?"'

'The cell was so silent and echoey,' adds Charlie. 'I think we were both relieved to be sharing a bunk bed.'

GHOSTLY GOINGS-ON

Later in the series they head to Northumberland's Chillingham Castle, which once housed a torture dungeon. 'It's haunted by a 17th-century Spanish witch,' says Daisy May. 'There's a lot of unanswered questions and some really crazy stuff happens.'

'Whether or not you've had a paranormal encounter yourself, these places are fascinating,' adds Charlie, who loved the chance to reunite with his sister on screen.

'We worked so closely with each other on This Country, but since then other work and family life has got in the way. This was a brilliant way of hanging out again, in a bizarre and weird environment.'

THE LONG WALK

MOVIE OF THE WEEK

THRILLER

From Monday, buy or rent from digital stores including Prime Video and Sky Store ★★★★

Set in a despotic, desperately poor alternate United States, this powerful dystopian drama, based on the first novel written by Stephen King, has a brutally simple, devastatingly gripping premise. Fifty young men, chosen by lottery, take part in the walk-or-die contest of the title. The winner is promised life-changing riches, but fall below a three-mile-per-hour pace and you receive three warnings, after which one of the soldiers accompanying the walkers shoots the slacker in the head.

In the hands of director Francis Lawrence, no stranger to staging dystopian contests on screen having helmed four of the Hunger Games films, The Long Walk is a gruelling watch, as it should be, but thanks in great part to the brilliant ensemble cast headed by Cooper Hoffman and David Jonsson, the bleakness is offset by the friendship and brotherhood that emerges among the walkers – along with moments of deadly spite and enmity. (Look out, as well, for Mark Hamill as the villainous military man overseeing the walk.)

Written while at college in 1966-67, King's tale was seen as an allegory of the Vietnam War and the draft that sent young men to die in it, but Lawrence's haunting adaptation proves it has chilling resonances with today's world, too. 2025, 15, 108MIN

The Conjuring: Last Rites

Available now, buy or rent from digital stores including Prime Video and Sky Store ★★★

If we can trust the title, Last Rites nails the coffin on the horror series kicked off in 2013, inspired by the supposed real-life cases of husband-and-wife ghost hunters Ed and Lorraine Warren (played over four films by Patrick Wilson and Vera Farmiga). This time, the spooky action plays out in 1980s Pennsylvania, where the devout Smurl family are haunted by an evil mirror that has a connection with the Warrens – and their newly engaged daughter, Judy (Mia Tomlinson). For much of its running time, Last Rites plays like a soapy family drama, and does this surprisingly well, but when it turns the screw of tension and dread, the series' tricks and techniques are too familiar to make the same impact as previous instalments. 2025, 15, 135MIN

MYSTERY THRILLER

Companion

Friday, 8.10am & 8pm, Sky Premiere ★★★★

Although it's a cliché, the less you know about this fiendish thriller the better. The trailer gives too much away, which is a shame because going in fresh will set you up for a grisly treat. All you need to know is self-proclaimed 'nice guy' Jack Quaid is taking his new girlfriend, devoted, people-pleasing Sophie Thatcher, to meet up with his pals (Megan Suri, Harvey Guillén and Lukas Gage) at a fabulous house out in the middle of nowhere, owned by a gregarious Russian (Rupert Friend). Once there, though, someone isn't who they seem... Writer-director Drew Hancock's debut is a superb lesson in juggling genres to create something special – the comedy elements are genuinely funny, the thriller aspects incredibly tense, while horror fans won't go away disappointed either. 2024, 15, 97MIN

BLACK COMEDY

Psycho Therapy

Saturday, 6.35am & 8.30pm, Sky Premiere ★★★★

The full title of this wickedly dark comedy cheekily sums it up – Psycho Therapy: The Shallow Tale of a Writer Who Decided to Write about a Serial Killer. Novelist John Magaro is approached by ex-serial killer Steve Buscemi to write about his exploits and methodology, but things become complicated when Magaro's wife, Britt Lower, thinks Buscemi is actually their marriage counseller – and that her husband is out to kill her. Kicking off low-key amusing, this builds to a wonderfully black crescendo to create something delightfully twisted. 2024, 15, 102MIN

A dopey but fun 'what if' riff based on a time when people really were terrified that the clock turning from 1999 to 2000 would end us, this is mostly amusing with an odd tonal shift when the machines start hacking folks up. The practical effects are a nice touch, though. 2024, 15, 91MIN

POLITICAL THRILLER

A House of Dynamite

Available now, Netflix ★★★★

Kathryn Bigelow, Oscar-winning director of Zero Dark Thirty, tackles the threat of nuclear war with her trademark intensity and realism in this disquietingly gripping drama, which presents us with a scarily plausible scenario in which global armageddon might come about. It begins with the discovery that an intercontinental missile, launched by an unidentified enemy from somewhere in the Pacific, is heading remorselessly towards the United States. In 19 minutes it will strike Chicago.

In real time Bigelow follows the desperately fraught US response over these 19 minutes from three different perspectives. First we see events unfold from the point of view of the White House Situation Room, where Rebecca Ferguson's senior duty officer and Jason Clarke's senior director strive to keep on top of the situation. Then we rewind the clock to follow two security advisors (Gabriel Basso, Greta Lee) as they try on the hoof to give their military bosses their insight and expertise. And finally, with the clock ticking down all over again, we shadow the US President (Idris Elba) himself, who learns of the impending disaster at a basketball game.

Noah Oppenheimer's screenplay feels vividly authentic, while the hand-held cameras and urgent score ramp up the tension to chilling effect. From 24 October. 2025, 15, 112MIN

The Lionesses celebrating their Euros victory in July

England v Brazil

THE MAIN EVENT

The European champions roar back in Manchester

LIVE FOOTBALL

Saturday, kick-off 5.30pm, ITV1

Following the victorious defence of their title at the Euros in the summer, England's Lionesses return to action for the first time since lifting the trophy with a mouth-watering game against Brazil at Manchester City's Etihad Stadium on Saturday.

It's sure to be a fascinating match-up between the European title holders and the South American champions, who England defeated on penalties in the Finalissima in 2023.

As fans get the chance to celebrate England's back-to-back Euros success, heroes Chloe Kelly, Michelle Agyemang and Hannah Hampton have been included in coach Sarina Wiegman's 25-woman squad. Uncapped Katie Reid, Lucia Kendall and Taylor Hinds earn call-ups, with Leah Williamson, Lauren Hemp and Lauren James all missing through injury.

BACK IN THE GAME

This fixture is the first of four internationals in the 'Homecoming Series', which sees England also take on Australia at Derby County's Pride Park on Tuesday (kick-off 7pm, ITV4), followed by a November game against China at Wembley and a December meeting with Ghana at Southampton's St Mary's Stadium.

There's also the small matter of the World Cup draw on Tuesday 4 November, when England will learn their opponents in the qualifying group as they bid to make the 2027 finals in Brazil.

'It's great to be back after such an incredible summer in Switzerland,' Wiegman says. 'In Brazil and Australia, we will be facing two top opponents who will test us in different ways, which is exactly the kind of challenge we need as we prepare for World Cup qualification starting next year.'

Prisoner 951

FIRST LOOK

Narges Rashidi and Joseph Fiennes star in a harrowing true-life drama

Here's an early look at BBC1's upcoming factual drama Prisoner 951, which explores the complex and moving events surrounding the incarceration of British-Iranian citizen Nazanin Zaghari-Ratcliffe.

The four-part series, which was filmed in Greece and the UK, sees Gangs of London actor Narges Rashidi play mother-of-one Nazanin, who made headlines across the globe when she was imprisoned by the Iranian state for six years from 2016 to 2022. And Joseph Fiennes portrays her husband Richard Ratcliffe, who led a long campaign to get justice and secure her release, which saw him go on hunger strikes outside the Iranian Embassy and the Foreign Office in London.

LONG JOURNEY

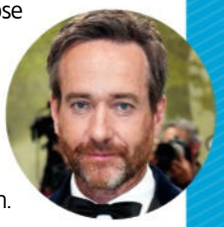
Penned by Stephen Butchard (This City Is Ours) and based on the book A Yard of Sky, written by Zaghari-Ratcliffe and Ratcliffe, which is out next year, the drama follows the couple from Nazanin's arrest at Imam Khomeini International Airport in Tehran in April 2016 to her return to the UK in 2022. Behi Djanati Atai co-stars as Nazanin's mother.

'Nazanin Zaghari-Ratcliffe and Richard Ratcliffe's extraordinary experiences captured everyone's hearts,' says a BBC spokesperson. 'Their journey is one of despair, courage and hope, spanning two countries and six years, and ultimately, it's a story of how this family, who were forced apart by international events, were finally reunited.'

WHAT'S NEXT FOR...

Matthew Macfadyen

Sky's US comedy drama The Miniature Wife sees the actor portray a man whose marriage takes a surprising turn when his spouse (Elizabeth Banks) is accidentally shrunk due to a technological glitch.

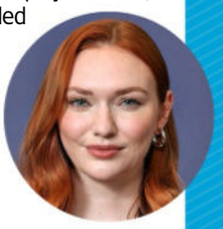


Ruth Jones

The actor will team up with Steve Speirs to write and star in BBC1's as-yet-untitled comedy about an environmental officer going through a divorce, who bonds with a widowed retired teacher.

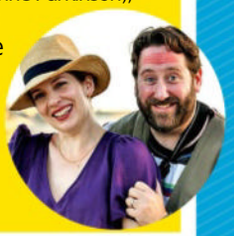
Eleanor Tomlinson

In 5's four-part thriller The Family Secret, the actor will play Amanda, whose life is upended when she receives an inheritance from a mystery man, which leads her into the path of the enigmatic Worrall clan.



Coming Back

BBC1's Here We Go will return for a fourth series to follow more mishaps for Rachel (Katherine Parkinson), Paul (Jim Howick) and the rest of the Jessops, while in this year's festive special the family celebrate New Year in chaotic style.



Next week — On sale Tuesday 28 October

Frankenstein

Guillermo del Toro writes and directs Netflix's horror tale starring Oscar Isaac.

Shetland
